

The candidates

The Busselton Dunsborough Times wraps up its profile series of the local government election candidates this week. See what the final three contenders hope to bring to the table.

Valerie Kaigg

A vote for Valerie Kaigg is a vote for...determination, persistence and an agenda reflective of the community voice.

Valerie Kaigg will be hoping sixth time is the charm as she again declares herself as a candidate for the Busselton council.

"I am standing because I want to be part of the decision-making process of our community," Ms Kaigg said. "I recognise that as a councillor you cannot please everyone all the time. However, if elected I will openly communicate with residents, ensuring a clear understanding and the opportunity to be heard. I am someone that is committed and passionate to anything I am involved with. I have the energy, time and am prepared to put in the hard work."

Ms Kaigg said she wanted to see the City shape initiatives to protect and enhance the places, lifestyle and environment the community loved, with the resources the community could afford.

"While I support much of the Corporate Business Plan as the means to deliver community goals and objectives, I am wary of the lifelong costs this inflicts on our ratepayers," she said. "Many of our businesses, land, homeowners and residents are struggling with increased costs and we need to minimise financial stress by keeping any rate rises to a minimum and look at what projects should take priority first. While finding solutions to revitalise CBD and progressing the big-ticket items are important and popular, it is also important we return to basics and provide the necessary services for our growing community."

As she reflected upon her years of experience in the group, construction development in the region and the impact this will have on the team, across every region.

"It makes me so proud to accept these awards on behalf of the 30 plus team that work tirelessly for an amazing result. Without the passion, drive and success of these people we couldn't provide what we do every day."

"Our Principal Designer, Rob Kirkovski, has many year's experience with a team of designers that are the best in the industry. This enables us to provide an outstanding product for our clients."
